21 (UPI).-Two hundred young demonstrators with a complaint against President Nixon last night ruined Ralph Albertazzie's perfect record.

Col. Albertazzie, of the U.S. Air Force, is the pilot of Mr. Nixon's plane, the Spirit of 76, and his boast was that he had never delivered the President late. But last night an hour be-continental missiles. But the United States has wanted to site both around its offensive missiles in the Midwest, where construction is already under way, rather than building one around Washington as exact parity would demand.

Congress has already turned down a Washington eite. It has appropriated money, some of it already spent, for the four Midwest sites. One is virtually completed, another is well along, and the final two are in early stages of preparation studies. But the Soviets might see two Midwest sites close to each other as offering greater total protection than two widely separate ones. Two contiguous rings can have a greater sum value than two distant ones, particularly if the Midwest sites are arrenged to give some protection to an important command center in

Colorado. Length of Treaty

Another possible sticking point was how long an ABM treaty would run. Argument on the duretion ranged between two and five years, the United States wanting the shorter period and the Soviets the longer one.

This would affect the freeze on offensive land and sea-based missiles that is to parallel the ABM treaty. As now envisaged, a comprehensive offensive weapon treaty, beyond the freeze, must be negotiated before expiration of the ABM treety or the entire arms deal will be canceled.

A third possible hang-up is the U.S. demand that the agreements incinde assurances that neither side will interfere with reconnaissance (spy) satellites. Thesa are the only reliable method, in the absence of on-site inspection which the Soviets adamantly refuse to contemplate, for policing the pacts.

Mr. Kissinger said both nations want to be extremely careful to button down all aspects of the arms restrictions on thesa nuclear weapons that are central to their strategic postures, particularly since the agreements are intended to become a foundation for further deals rather than a source of future controversy, Experts on each side designed the weapons with different approaches to achieve different results, and balancing them off, he implied, was responsible for the difficulties in negotiations. The outstanding major issue,

Mr. Kissinger said, is not a (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

There have been some frantic last-minute efforts here to tidy up the part of Moscow the Presimorning women workers were still laying paving stones on the vast Leninsky Prospekt, along which Mr. Nixon will ride to town after flying in from Salzburg, Austria, tomorrow.

Today's policy pronouncements came in the Communist party newspaper, Prayda. A front-page editorial urged normalization of

If the President was shaken hy that welcome to normally peaceful Salzburg, he did not show it today. Mr. Nixon, dressed in a light-blue suit, was in an amiable mood. He posed for pictures with a teen-age girl in blue jeans. He signed autographs for policemen. He made fun of security adviser Henry A. Kissinger's reputation as a swinger hy telling a young woman that the former professor had heen to "China, Russia—and Hollywood."

The demonstrations continued today, with violence around the press headquarters. As television cameras whirred, a long-haired young man pulled down a sevenyard-long U.S. flag, then lost a 30-second tug-of-war with police for possession of the banner. About 200 other demonstrators on the scene retreated.

Security men with the President took no chances. At the Kobenzi restaurant, White House agents examined all photographers' camera bags and newsmen's tape recorders. When someone in a red jacket was spotted standing about 2,000 feet up the mountainside, three helicopters swooped down like angry hornets astonishing the "suspected sniper," who turned out to be a mother and daughter on an innocent mountain hike.

Father's and Son's Views

Mr. Kreisky's 28-year-old son, Peter, took part in anti-Nixon demonstrations last night and today. But this afternoon he indicated he was tired of violence. The demonstrators made no effort to approach Klessheim Palace or the restaurant where Mr. Nixon and the young man's father were lunching.

Asked about his son's participation in the demonstrations, Chancellor Kreisky told newsmen: "My son is a 28-year-old man. His political views are his own, and he has the full right to express them, I have no intention or possibility to stop

"It is an example of the basically democratic attitude in my family," Mr. Kreisky declared. The chancellor defended the police tactic last night of charging demonstrators at the airport and of using their nightsticks on the protesters. "They carried out their duty." Mr. Kreisky said of the police. Participants in illegal demonstrations must expect a confrontation with the police." Mr. Ziegler said the demonstrations had "in no way marrec" the presidential party's visit to Salzburg.

Peter Kreisky said : "I tried to get on the runway to join the fight with the police, but the police stopped me. I was in the crowd behind the barriers." It was this crowd which shouted "Nixon, murderer!" and other epithets as the President and Mr. Kreisky drove from the air-ers so that they will "work to-Speaking to newsmen at a White House reception on the eve of his departure, Mr. Nixon said that on the basis of his extensive correspondence with Mr. Brezhnev and including a message delivered to Camp David by Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. but to take "a step that is significant" during the summit. Mr. Nixon cautioned newsmen not to raise their hopes too nigh for his trip, because "significant differences will remain between the two countries. But it was clear from his remarks that he expected considerable substantive agreements to emerge from his talks with Mr. Brezhnev and relations between Washington and Moscow and sought to fend off any Chinese charge of ideological betrayal by saying that the summit talks are "fully in keeping with the interests of World So-

But he stressed that "it is not a Vietnam summit" and expressed confidence that the Indochina war would not interfere with the efforts of the United States and the Soviet Union to improve relations.

Mr. Kissinger spoke about the summit and what it could mean to the world. He said the President hoped to halt the negative flow of Soviet-American relations and to chart a new course toward mutual restraint and, with progress, toward a mutual vested interest in keeping the peace.

Mr. Nixon sees big-power restraint as a key factor in the peace of the world, Mr. Kissinger said, since this restraint is the only means to a confidence that will enable the two nations to create a more permanent relationship.

VIGIL—An elderly South Vietnamese woman and pet eat have lunch while looking after tombs of Vietnamese emperors at Hné. Although many of the city's residents have fled, she chose to remain behind at the Ming Mang tombs of the old Imperial City.

And Courteous to American Visitors

Hanoi, at War for Decades, Remains Tranquil

By Anthony Lewis

HANOI (NYT).-There is an air of grotesque unreality to life in Hanol.

A gardener clips the hedge of the old Tonkin imperial residence and a visitor stands outside, admiring the city's magnificent trees and watching the birds. Then the anti-aircraft guns start firing.

No one could miss the fact that this is a city at war: the shelters everywhere, the uniforms, the guns all say that.

But there remains 'a strange tropical tranquility. A girl hicycles by, balancing baskets of spinsch at either end of a bamboo pole. Walking down the street at night one hears a record of "Swan Lake" from a window of what turns out to be the home of Hanoi's mayor.

It is not only that the setting seems odd for a country that has been at war almost continuously for 27 years. It is unreal that these people could for seven years have been fighting the most powerful country in the world,

Beantiful and Reserved

They are tiny people, often with delicate bones and long. slim fingers. Westerners gathered in the Thong Nhat Ectel look gross by comparison. The women notably beautiful - and are reserved. Stories about bar girls in Saigon find no echoes here and it is impossible to observe even a come-hither look.

Working hours start early because of the hot, muggy weather. They may run from 6:30 a.m. to 11 a.m., and, after a siesta, from 2:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

There are no air conditioners except here or there in an embassy. Large celling fans move the air and young men drive pedicarts carrying huge blocks of ice to be chipped into drinks. The early hours produce some odd eating phenomena. At 8 o'clock one morning at an interview, a correspondent was offered successively beer, coffee, tea, candy, cookies and a banana. Bananas are served at almost every meal, evidently because they are in good supply. Other fruit is not, although vegetables are plentiful in markets and at many street corners. So far neither the mining of North Vietnam's harbors nor the increased U.S. bombing seem to have affected food supplies seriously. Fish and prawns are still served, as is excellent beef.

Those seeking Western drinks might have trouble. Soviet vodka, wine and champagne are avail-

Saigon Declares Schumann Is Biased in Solution to War

EAIGON, May 21 (AP).-The heim so eager to serve Nixon in South Vietnamese government ac-cused Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France yesterday of being bissed and "on the side of the Communists" in proposing a solution to the Vietnam war. Mr. Schumann told the French National Assembly's Foreign Affairs Committee last Thursday that a political solution to the war should turn around two points-an independent and neutral South Vietnam, not submerged or annexed by the North, and a coalition government in the South.

He said the peace talks in Paris could be resumed only on the basis of those two ideas.

Minister, Tran Van Lam, said, vesterday: "Mr. Schumann has shown himself to be on the side of the Communists when he presents the Communist coalition government doctrine by the sosiled Liberation Front of South Victnam. The blased observa-tion of Minister Schumann is to be deplored. Instead of helping the progress of the Paris peace talks, it violates the impartial attitude the French government should have while the peace talks are in progress in Paris."

10,000 March to Protest Wa In D.C., Burn Effigy of Nixo. WASHINGTON, May 21 (AP) .- strators in a motiey flotile

Some 10,000 anti-war demonstrators rallied on Capitol Hill today to hear demands for the impeachment of President Nixon while a few hundred rock-throwing militants broke windows and clashed with police. .

In late afternoon, the police reported that 179 members of tha small but violent minority had been arrested. The nature of the charges was not immediately available.

The splinter group, calling itself the Anti-Imperial Contingent, beeled away from the preliminary march from the Washington Monument to burn an effigy of Mr. Nixon and break several windows at the Justice Department building. At least two were arrested there.

Later the troublemakers moved to the Health, Education and Welfare building near the Mall and broke eight windows and glass doors before being driven off by police.

They returned to an area just west of the Capitol grounds, where they pelted police with rocks and bottles, numbering among their victims Washington Police Chief Jerry Wilson, whose face was bloodled by a rock. Several other officers were hit, but apparently none were seriously hurt.

The violent dissenters broke several street lights, ripped up some street signs and overturned trash containers in the street. The police replied with tear gas, some of which drifted up on the Hill where the speechmaking was in progress.

The crowd was only a small fraction of totals at similar demonstrations here in the past, when estimates ranged from 60,000 to more than 100,000. Nor was the violence as widespread as in other confrontations, notably last May. Sidney Peck, a principal or-ganizer, blamed the relatively small turnout on threatening weather and the short time available for organizing the protest, timed to coincide with Mr. Nixon's journey to Moscow. Rep. Bella Abzug, D., N.Y., was one of the first speakers and drew cheers when she demanded the impeachment of Mr. Nixon. -a move she already has launched in the House without attracting any widespread support. ..

Among the groups participating in the peacefull part of the protest were the National Peace Action Coalition, the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice. Victorm Veterans Against the War, the Communist party of Illinois, Students for a Democratic Society and a few_organteations of homosexuals?

countries, American government is so truly open and changeable through the ballot that conventional political assassins seldom arise. Only the mentally ill of a particular bent come to believe that it is necessary to kill a President to achieve their goals, Dr. Donald W. Hastings, professor and head of the department of psychiatry and neurology at the University of Minnesots, has made a study of the lives of the nine men who have attempted to assassinate eight Presidents (four succeeded), and has concluded that all except the two Puerto Rican nationalists who tried to shoot President Truman in 1950 showed symptoms of paranoid schizophrenia and had similar personal histories.

The assault on Mr. Truman is the only one believed to have been part of a genuine political conspiracy, in this case to win independence for Puerto Rico. Dr. Hastings notes that although John Wilkes Booth hoped his murder of President Lincoln would be seen as part of a plot in behalf of the defeated Confederacy, Booth was clearly men-

According to the experts, tha processes that led to derangement of all the assassins began early in life when circumstance interferred with the normal way in which a young boy develops basic concepts of his own identity or role in the world. Family Life

In each of the cases, family life during this crucial period appears to have been severely disturbed and unstable. Oswald's father died before Lee was born and the boy was raised by a domineering. overprotective mother. The fathers of Ray and Sirhan both beat their sons frequently and both abandoned their families when their sons were in their early teens. In the case of Bremer, the relationship with the father appears to hove been somewhat better. However, according to neighbors and friends, there are many indications of a rocky home life with fighting, and a mother who was strong-willedfor example, she would not let her son go out for football in high school because she thought him too sickly.

In all four lives there is evidence of difficulties in relating to women. Ray and Sirham, for. example, are believed never to have had a girl friend. Psychoanalysts consider this a classic outcome of a boyhood in which stable male identity is not Relationships with people in general also appear to have been impaired in all four. Acquaintances of all of them have described them as loners with no close friends. Anyone who said hello was likely to be greeted with a vacant stare.

Such behavior, psychiatrists generally agree, indicates that the individual is unable to trust people. Becoming friends with somebody means opening one's self up to some extent, and a person who finds he cannot trust even his parents in childhood seldom comes to trust atrangers. "Often this kind of behavior develops into a paranoid ideation," said Dr. Hastings. "The person distrusts others, feels that if he lets his guard down, they

trists explain, the person becomes unable to distinguish between his own imagination and reality. Yet another similarity among the three convicted assessins and the accused assailant is that they led lives of repeated failure-a failure that the psychiatrists say should be measured against the person's own estimate or fantasy of his capabilities. Oswald expected to be hailed as a hero when he defected to the Soviet Union and was crushed to find the Russians did not want him. Ray was a constant drifter, in and out of prison many times. He fancied himself a jailhouse lawyer but when he spoke, he damaged his case. Sirhan wanted to be a diplomat but flunked out of college, planned to become a famous jockey and got a job as an exercise boy but was thrown from a horse and Bremer's life is similar. His notebooks show that at various times he hoped to be a great writer or photographer, but he could get jobs only as a janitor

What happens when such a loveless, lonely, hating, frustrated, psychically and socially altenated and incoordinated man attaches himself to a political movement with profound and wide appeal?" asks Dr. Lawrence Z. Freedman of the University of Chicago.

"If his alienation and psychic incoordination are not paralyzing, he may become the leader of a movement which projects into political and military action his private marderous hate," he said. However, when such a man lacks sufficient cohesion of personality to stir, organize and direct others, he may become an assassin."

Dr. Abrahamsen believes that such men sometimes choose to kill persons who have achieved what they themselves want but can never hope to attain.

Thus Oswald, a leftist who once said he could become premier of Cuba, killed a liberal President who already led a powerful country. Bremer may have wanted to be like Gov. Wallace and could not be, Dr. Abrahamsen

Congress Group Urges Change in Price Controls

WASHINGTON, May 21 (AP).

-The immediate removal of wage and price controls from all segments of the American economy except big bosiness and labor was recommended today by the joint economic committee of the U.S. Congress.

As an alternative, the committee report proposed exempting the working poor, all companies with fewer than 1,000 employees and all state and government workers, and the abolition of rent controls. It also recommended tighter controls over corporate profits and a freeze on executive salaries above $200,000 a year for the duration of the control program. Only the Democratic majority on the joint House and Senate committee joined in the recommendations. The Republicans issued a minority report expressing general approval of the way controls are working.

The majority report said Phase of President Nixon's new economic policy has led to economic injustices and has failed to control inflation.

West Berlin Flow to East At Peak Tide

Delays Reported During Weekend

BERLIN, May 21 (AP).-West Berliners by the hundreds of thousands celebrated a joyous Penacost reunited with relatives and friends in East Berlin and East Germany today.

A Saturday rush subsided to o steady stream today through nine wall crossing points. East German processing was controlled but polite for those on the way into the East.

An early morning crush on the main autobahn link dissolved by noon but other crossing points reported periods of waiting up to Yesterday, the flood of Western visitors crossing in beavy rain epparently caught the Eastern guards flatfooted, and they struggled to keep up fast processing without abandoning controls. Many had to wait as long as eight or nine hours and lines of waiting traffic stretched for up to six miles.

Mayor Klaus Schuetz of West Berlin and his family were re-ported to have gone into the East German countryside for a one-day stay, but no details of his visit were available.

8-Day Period

Today was the fifth day of an eight-day special pass period that ends Wednesday. For the second time since Easter, the East Germans allowed visits by West Berlinera and eased access controls on transit roads in what the Communist side called a gesture of good will. The gesture was calculated to help West German ratification of Eastern treaties, now accomplished.

West Berliners will get 30 eastern visiting days a year and transit controls on persons and freight will be such as those now temporarily in effect when the four-power Berlin agreement is made final next month,

The signing is expected to be June 15 in the Allied Control Council building in West Berlin, where ambassadors of the four powers worked out a Berlin pact concluded in September of last

For the latter, a gateway to regular visits to long-lost places— and new ones for their children—as well as uncomplicated processing coming and going to West Germany now loom ahead.

East Germans Assail Bonn

BERLIN, May 21 (UPI).-East Germany ended today the long truce it has observed with the West German government of Chancellor Willy Brandt during the long debate over ratification of the nonaggression pacts with Russia and Poland.

Angered by rejection of the East German bid to join the World Health Organization, East German propagandists took off the kid gloves they were while the debate raged. The pacts, sought by Russia, were ratified by the West German parliament last week.

Neues Deutschland, the Communist party newspaper, charged that West Germany put pressure on nations participating in the world health conference in Geneva last week to block East German membership. The paper warned that such action could block the East-West German talks on normalization of relations sought by Mr. Brandt.

The French bave accused Barbie, allegedly wartime Gestapo chief in Lyons, of being respon-sible for Mr. Moulin's death. It was believed likely that the French hero's death will be discussed in a series of Altmann interviews scheduled to begin ap-

There Is a Europe

Union may not discuss the matter in precisely these terms, but a major subject in their conversations must be the fact of Europe. For them, the problem will be complicated by diverse ideas about their own relationship to that continent. Is a Russian the most easterly of Europeans or the most westerly of Asians? Is an American an outpost of Europe or does he possess a nationality sui generis? This can be argued geographically, culturally, economically. But to the European, there can be little doubt: From sheer self-defense, he must regard both as aliens.

For Europe generated so much power-intellectual, scientific, military—that it dominated the world. And then it blew up from its inner tensions. By 1945 it seemed only a devastated no-man's-land between the sturdier fabrics of the United States and the Soviet Union, and in the years that followed, its global hegemony melted away. Its eastern portions came under Soviet rule; those of the west took on an increasingly American cast, and the Europe that had given law and letters to mankind seemed doomed to be divided permanently into spheres of influence for the superpowers. The nationalism that had epurred such initially constructive, but eventually disastrous competition among Europeans hampered united action-except in the context of alliances dominated by the superpowers.

But that nationalism persisted as a dynamic force, as well as an obstructive element.

Mr. Nixon and the leaders of the Soviet Tempered by a recognition of common European interests, it evolved institutions, initially only defensive (the Common Market. for example), from which a continental entity could emerge. And when the superpowers began to recognize the limitations on their own strength, Europe began to live

> Queen Elizabeth II slept in the Petit Trianon. Bonn began to talk to the East. Both the Warsaw Pact and NATO developed fissures. It is odd to recall that, 27 years after the surrender of Nazi Germany-six years longer than the whole time between the armistice of 1918 and the outbreak of war again in 1939—there is still no general peace treaty in Europe. Instead of the carefully detailed arrangements laid down in Versailles, there are many ambiguitles, many disputed points and boundaries. But there is a growing agreement to disagree and to make the best of the status quo.

Today's Europe is a very untidy affair. Its status in international law might drive a Grotius to dispair and its ideological complexities would defy a Karl Marx to elucidate. just as its boundaries and alliances would make Metternich weep. But it is thriving and alive, and neither Mr. Nixon nor Mr. Brezhnev can hope to keep it in leading strings much longer. It is not the Europe of the Congress of Vlenna, of the Berlin Congress, of the Versailles Conference. But it is a fact—and one that is steadily becoming more significant to a rather more untidy historic visit to the Soviet Union is a measure of how far the world's superpowers have moved toward peaceful if competitive coexistence since the abortive summit of 1960 and the Cuban confrontation of 1962. Each side might have been tempted, for short-run political advantage, to call off Mr. Nixon's trip; and undoubtedly voices in both Washington and Moscow urged cancellation.

It has not happened for one simple reason: Each side recognized that it had much more to gain from talking at the highest level than from wrecking, in a climate of accusation and recrimination over Vietnam, an opportunity that might not arise again for a long time.

Welcome as is this eagerness to parley, it should not give rise to outsize hopes for immediate massive gains. It would be worthwhile-would leave the world a marginally safer place-if the only major accomplishment were the expected agreement to clamp limitations on strategic weapons systems. Other possibilities are a start toward cooperation in the coming rounds of space exploration and an agreement at last to expand two-way trade, probably garnished with some of the American credit facilities long sought by Moscow.

Mr. Nixon's four days in Moscow will become genuinely historic if he succeeds in narrowing markedly the Soviet-American differences on the Middle East; or if he works out with his Soviet hosts a fresh Moscow has strong incentives to want the meeting to be fruitful. In trying to modernize its economy and satisfy rising expectations of its citizens, the Soviet government is now almost desperately eager to import American technology and modern machinery if it can obtain credits. The same pressing requirements undoubtedly have made the Kremlin more willing at last to limit strategic arms and reduce its military spending.

The Kremlin's eagerness to advance its own version of detente in Europe-already evidenced by its concern for West Germany's ratification of their nonaggression treaty and the new four-power agreement on Berlin-unquestionably owes much to its concern for what Moscow sees as a rising threat from China along its eastern frontier. By receiving Mr. Nixon, the Kremlin may hope to diminish the long-run possibility of a Sino-American alliance directed against

For both the United States and Russiaand for the world—the stakes at Moscow will be high. Mr. Nixon's decision to go was the right one even in an election year and despite his resentment over Russia's military aid to North Vietnam. Americans of all political persuasions can only hope for his doned what pretentions to innocence it had carried through World War II and formally adopted a doctrine of global anti-communism. The Truman Doctrine, embodied for the first time in a bill signed that day, declared, in Harry Truman's own words. "It must be the policy of the United States to support free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressures." The bill provided $400 million in aid for Greece and Turkey. "I realized that this would be only the beginning," Truman wrote in his memoirs, continuing: "With this enactment by Congress of aid to Greece and Turkey, America had served notice that the march of communism would not be allowed to succeed by default."

We will not pause here to venture judgment on whether Harry Truman was right to see the great menace he did in the limited situations then existing in Greece and Turkey, or to frame the kind of generalized interventionist policy he did to cope with the perceived menace, or to manipulate Congress and the public as he did in order to ensure their endorsement of his policy.

On May 22, 1947, the United States aban- Debate on these fateful decisions is vigorous -and necessary-and will long roll on.

> We will merely note certain symmetries: 25 years to the day after one President signed the bill that committed this country to an open-ended confrontation with communism, taken then as identical with Soviet power, another President-who as a freshman congressman had supported the bill-arrives in the Soviet Union to attempt to soften some of the effects of that confrontation. The turnabout is far from complete. Doubtless it would not embarrass Mr. Nixon to state that in Vietnam he is still pursuing-with little perceptible adjustment of the original concept to allow for the change in the world in the ensuing years—a policy of supporting a free people resisting attempted subjugation by an armed minority and outside pressure. But the premise of his trip has to be that the Soviet Union is less a cause on the "march" than a country whose national interests can and must be fitted in increasing measure to the interests of the United States. It has been a long 25 years.

The Agenda for Nixon and Brezhnev

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—The practical questions on the Nixon-Breshney agenda—the control of strategic weapons, the expansion of trade, the joint exploration of space, etc.—have all been settled or almost settled in advance, so there will be plenty of time to discuss the problems of ending the war in Vietnam, and avoiding another Arab-Israeli convulsion in the Middle East.

There has been a good deal of quiet diplomatic activity on the Vietnam peace terms in recent days. Dr. Henry Kissinger has seen Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin almost every day since the blockade of Haiphong. Efforts have been made to persuade the friends of Hanoi elsewhere specifically in Peking and Paristhat a cease-fire after or even before the battle for Hué would leave Hanci in control of all the strategic territory it now holds in the South and lead inevitably to some kind of coalition gov-

When Dr, Kissinger was in Moscow to arrange the Nixon mission, he tried, with the help of the Soviets, to arrange for top North Vietnamese leaders to come from Hanoi and meet him in the Soviet capital, but nothing came of this and of course it was before the U.S. air and naval counteroffensive against Hanoi and Haiphong.

Mission for Connolly?

Nevertheless, efforts to revive the peace talks continue. In fact, there is some influential support here for sending the retiring Secretary of the Treasury, John Connally, to Paris to spell out President Nixon's latest peace offer and try to break the diplomatic stalemate.

Nixon's three-point suggestion was (1) that all prisoners of war should be released: (2) an internationally supervised cease-fire should be proclaimed, at which time (3) all American forces would be removed from Vietnam within four months and the political settlement of the country left to the contending Vietnamese parties themselves.

The Nixon argument, which will undoubtedly be pressed hard in Moscow, is that this provides Hanoi with a better prospect than continued bombing of troops and supplies in the North, and that an agreement by the United States and the Soviet Union to limit arms shipments would encourage both Hanoi and Saigon to reach a negotiated settlement. It is doubtful that Brezhnev would agree to do more than try to persuade Hanoi to reopen the talks. The Soviets are taking a very hard line about what they will do if there is any direct bombing

Slim Chances

The chances of any U.S.-Soviet agreement on the Middle East are even slimmer. Moscow's influence in the Arab states that control most of the known petroleum reserves of the world greatly increases its strategic possibilities. With its expanding nevy in the Mediterranean, the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean, it is already in a position to interfere with the supply of oil from the Middle East to Japan and Western Europe in any major crisis, riers to its navy, as it undoubt-edly will do, this will greatly expand the range of its power. Against these larger world strategic considerations, any Soviet deal with the United States that seemed to limit the Arab claims against Israel is not at all likely. Nixon and Brezhnev have a common interest in secing that the United States and the Soviet Union do not allow the Israeli-Arab difficulties to drag them into a major war against their will, but outside of precautions to this end, plus keeping nuclear weapons out of the hands of all the Middle Eastern states, little more can be expected on this front in Moscow. Even so, the agreements be-tween the United States and the

Not History but Policy

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS.—This coming week's Moscow summit differs in American eyes from that which preceded it in Peking. President Nixon's visit to the Chinese capital was regarded as a historic landmark. No such pretension is made about the journey to the Soviet Union which is seen as a major political event but not a watershed.

The two trips are nevertheless closely related in the elaboration of United States policy. What Washington calls "the Chinese option" is essential to its Soviet And the triangular relationship of Washington, Moscow and Peking is further complicated by American determination that Japan should remain a permanent U.S. ally in the Pacific, despite improved relationships with China and Rus-sider Southeast Asia a world danger point. Current activities peripheral to the war including the inconvenience to Soviet shipping and the inferential blow to Soviet prestige occasioned by the U.S. blockede of North Vietnam and also including widely advertised plans to send Russian ordnance across China are, in fact, peripheral to the main issues of the Nixon-Brezhney talks. From the Chinese viewpoint, as Nixon ascertained in Peking the ultimate issue pertaining to Vietnam is the regional power and influence in Southeast Asia of the Soviet Union. From the Soviet viewpoint it is China itself, Moscow's enormous and uncertain neighbor.

The Russians take a long-range look at the Chinese and it is heavily tinged with militarism. Not only is a quarter of the Soviet Army stationed along China's border but Moscow is convinced China's future will depend largely on its generals because this has almost always been the case in Chinese history. Moreover, as military men eventually move to the top, the Kremlin feels they will constitute a moderating element despite their affection for hig parades and big speeches. Both Nixon and Brezhnev are ready to give a positive slant to their meeting by making commercial deals, space accords and by announcing a breakthrough to agreement in the SALT talks. which gained impetus when West Germany finally ratified its new relationship with the East.

But the subject that will probably be discussed in most detail and with least agreement is the Middle East. The United. States is quite as anxious to get Russion troops and military installations out of Egypt as the Soviet Union is to get ours out of Irriochina. But, although Moscow hates the enormous expense of its Egyptian enterprise, it feels it cannot afford to start pinching rubles now.

Both Nixon and Brezhnev ably that the Middle East is perhaps the only geographical area where a blow-up could produce another superpower confrontstion and they obviously hope to minimize that danger. But the Russians, whose unsuccessful Middle Eastern ventures since 1945 have given them a kind of complex, don't want to risk another blow to their prestige.

They emphasize that their troops in Egypt are noncombat units manning defensive weapons stationed to the rear. They add that on the Arab side of the conflict with Israel there is an enormous gap in education and know-how that might take a generation to rectify. For this reason they feel it necessary to maintain their protective shield.

Writing Pupil's Short Story 2 Are Arrested In Million Dollar Creative Clue to QE 2 Hoax Mass. Art Theft

NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT) .-The Federal Bureau of Investigation is examining the possibility that the anonymous caller who threatened to blow up the Queen Elizabeth 2.00 the high seas was inspired by the first draft of a farcial short story that was read to a creative writing workshop at Hunter College on Tuesday night.

Sources close to the investiga-tion identified the short story as their "main lead." They said the similarities between the story and what the caller told the Cunard Line were so striking as to virtually rule out the possibility of a

PARIS, MONDAY, MAY 22, 1972 The Facts About Brezhnev Are Scarce, But His Reputation Is Big

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW (WP).—Leonid I. Brezhnev, who will be the dominant figure on the Soviet side during this week's talks President Nixon, admits that he smokes too much. He likes to bunt and drive a car, he jokes with gusto and he likes to talk, often practicing a Russian form of circumiccution. He is married, has two children and two grandchildren, eats well. dresses with a care for detail if not for modern styles, and has the instincts of a politician. That is a brief description, yet it covers most of what is publicly known about him.

Mr. Brezhnev stepped out of an "apparatchik's" career in October, 1964, to inherit the leaderof the Soviet Communist party from Nikita S. Khrushchev. Since then he has consolidated his power, transformed Soviet foreign policy and been exposed for the first time to the Western world, in France last October. But he has not divulged more than a hint of his personality.

Mr. Brezhnev grew up far from the capital in the Ukraine, rose from humble origins, got himself an education, and entered politics, and was carried to the highest reaches of power by an influential patron, Mr. Khrush-

No Strong Mark

His ascendancy has not been accompanied by great popularity nor has he left a strong personal mark on his country. No one who has dealt with him, it seems, has a poor opinion of him, yet no one talks of him as ar especially imposing figure.

Mr. Brezhnev has protected bimself from public exposure with a deliberateness that suggests some insecurity to diplomats in Moscow. When the French, for example, asked him to hold a news conference in Paris last fall, he refused. As general secretary of the Soviet party, he has given only one interview-to the French Communist newspaper, L'Humanité. The questions posed by its reable, yet they produced the only revealing anecdotes about Mr. Brezhnev on the public record.

He showed the reporter his cigarette case, equipped with a timer that allowed it to open only at a set interval. He had set it for 45 minutes between smokes. "Yesterday," Mr. Brezh-nev said in the interview last fall, "using this system, I was able to smoke only 17 cigarettes

L'Humanité's correspondent also discovered the general secretary's love for cars-a discovery that apparently prompted President Georges Pompidou of France to make him a gift o/ a Citroën-Maserati automobile.

"When I am driving." Mr. Brezhnev said in the interview, "I have the impression that nothing can happen. . . . "

Perhaps the clearest indication of Mr. Brezhnev'e cantion was a television speech to the French during his visit. While he said how much he had enjoyed his stay, French television officials reported that the speech had been recorded in Moscov: before Mr. Brezhnev left for Paris.

If he is careful in public, Mr. Brezhnev is described as talkative and friendly in private. In his

Mr. Brezhnev's heavy eyehrows and thick facial features have not helped his reputation. "I think a lot of people have made the mistake of underestimating him because hs doesn't look so bright," said one of the Westerners in Moscow who has met him. The eyebrows are the subject of jokes among Russians.

Westerners in Moscow have concluded that Premier Alexei N. Kosygin is more popular here than Mr. Brezhnev-a finding

An 'Eerie Single-Mindedness'

In Hanoi, the War Is Everything

By Anthony Lewis

HANOI (NYT). - When Henry Kissinger briefed the White House press on May 9 about the decision to mine North Vietnamese ports, he ended by saying that he still hoped for a negotiated settlement. 'Even in Vietnam," he said, "there must be some realities that transcend the parochial concern of the con-

The briefest visit to North Vietnam would probably revise Mr. Kissinger's hopes. It must be one of the most parochial countries on earth, seemingly wholly concerned with itself and its war.

Listening to the radio in a languege one does not speak, one hears sgain and again-every few sentences it seems-the words "Mien-Nam Vietnam," meaning South Vietnam, Another femiliar word is a name that newspapers spell 'Nich-xon." The papers are all about Vietnam; the news from abroad concerns foreign comments on the war.

This single-mindedness is eerle to someone brought up in the casual, non-ideological American tradition. But it is plainly a factor that President Nixon and Mr. Kissinger must consider as they weigh practical possibilities of ending the war. Along with the concentration on the one subject, there is an air of supreme self-confidence—as far as can be told, quite genuine.

Rounding It Off

For example, a week ago a young man from Than Hoa, the most heavily bombed province, spoke about a bridge there at Hamrong. During the Johnson years, Americans bombed it repeatedly but never cut it. The North Vietnamese said they shot down 99 planes at the bridge by 1968-when the bombing was halted-and the young man said: "Nixon added one more last December to round it off."

A few days later, the U.S. command announced that Hamrong bridge had been cut. The young men was asked whether he had beard about it. "Oh yes," he said cheerily, "I heard it on the BBC. But if it is so, they will

Where does their confidence come from? Most foreign experts on Vietnam cite history as a major factor, and from here that seems convincing. The street that runs in front of the main hotel in Hanol is named for King Ngo Quyen, who expelled the Chinese overlords in the year 938. Another street is named for the Trung sisters, who led a revolt against the Han Chinese in the 1st century.

In an odd way, the country that all this brings to mind is Israel. There, too, history has given the nation determination and self-confidence utterly out of proportion to its size. And there, too, there is the basic conviction -often irritating to allies-that the country cannot rely on outsiders but has to take care of

Signs of Fanaticism

European Communist newspapermen, like the few non-Communist journalists here, find much in North Vietnamese attitudes that go beyond determination to fanaticism. How, for example, should one react to an experience like the following:

The other day I was invited to the house where the provisional revolutionary government of South Vietnam has its representation in Hanoi—the former U.S. consulate general. There I met Miss Pham Thi Nguyen, a 22-year-old from South Vietnam.

Miss Nguyen, who talked with great animation and smiled shyly, said U.S. soldiers had killed her parents and eight brothers and sisters in a village near Da Nang, South Vietnam, in August, 1965. At the age of 15, she said, she stole explosives, made a mine and killed seven

She said she was taken prisoner in 1967 and tortured by U. S. and South Vietnamese soldiers. Among other actions, she said, they nailed her hands to a wooden table. She was eventually rescued by guerrillas, she continued, and joined them. She won designation as an "intrepid fighter" after killing 21 Amerimonths.

Propaganda? Of course. Could there nevertheless be some truth in it? Judging by Miss Nguyen's demeanor as she told the story. yes. There are horrors enough on both sides in this war; we know anything can be true.

But there may be a different point to make of that conversation. It lies in the very fact that it was considered useful to tell such a chilling story. All wars brutalize, but there can heve been few as brutalizing as

Toll Is Doubted

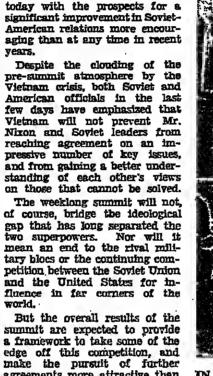

Even without individual atrocity stories there is reason enough for the average North Viet-nemese to feel bitterness. I saw Haiphong last week and parts of it-including a hospital, a school and extensive housing—have been flattened. The official figure of deaths from all-day raids April 16 is 244, but some Western dip-Iomats think well over 1,000 may havs died.

In these circumstances—and many other examples of destruction aimed at civilians—it is remarkable that most North Vietnamese continue to make a distinction between "aggressors" and other Americans. Strangers generally are treated with courtesy and kindness.

Another extraordinary fact is that the country is prepared to take more destruction. Or at least many people say so, and convincingly. Officials say they expect a further U.S. escalation. With that in mind, they have ordered-most of Hanoi's residents to evacuate to the countryside.

In practical terms for Mr. Kissinger, all this means that counting on the North Vietnamese to "reasonable" and fit into some nest global package is almost certainly misguided. There is simply no Western observer bere who thinks Hanoi will give up its basic demand that President Nguyen Van Thieu resign from the Saigon administration. One non-Communist observer here put it: "This is the same for them as 1940 for Britain. Or maybe it is something more. I've never met people like this. The threshold-of-pain theory does not agreements more attractive than the maintenance of tension and Mr. Nixon will take with him to Moscow a book itemizing what is known in diplomatic jargon listing of subjects expected to arise during his talks with Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Com-munist party leader, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Nikolal V. Podgorny. The book, Which contains the American position on all key issues, is high-ly classified. What followe is an educated, guess at some of the "talking points" that will come up during the trip and how the issues might be resolved.

International Issues

EUROPE: Although it is quiet and relatively free of East-West tensions, Europe remains a highpriority item for the summit, Progress on issues relating to Europe is guaranteed as the result of the recent compromise in Bonn insuring the ratification of the West German-Soviet treaty of 1970, which serves as the linchnin for other agreements. A date will be discussed at the summit for the Big Four signing of the Berlin accord negotiated last fall, hut which was held np until ratification of the German treaty.

Once the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France have given endorsement to the Berlin accord, which should remove that divided city as an East-West issue, the United States and other NATO countries will join with the Soviet Union and Eastern bloc nations in discussing the holding sometime next year of a conference on European security and cooperation, a conference long proposed by the Russians as a way to improve cooperation in Europe. Mr. Nixon will undoubtedly agree to communiqué language supporting the conference, but will insist on telling the Soviet leaders that the Americans envisage the meeting as one that should do more than maintain the status quo in Europe. The United States believes the conference should also take steps to reduce the cold war harriers that still exist in Europe on the free flow of ideas-

Mr. Nixon and Mr. Brezhnev can also be expected to discuss the possibility of mutual and balanced force reductions in Europe, although no formal action is contemplated at this summit. Both sides, while publicly favoring the idea in principle, have shown no desire to rush into such negotiations for fear that they might upset the present strategic balance in Europe. ASIA: Vietnam will, of course, be very much on both Mr. Nixon's and Mr. Brezhnev's minds.

IN THE KREMLIN-Main study of Grand Kremlin Palace where President Nixon will their decision ahead with the summit indicated, louder than any words, that they were not going to let Vietnam block progress on East-West issues with the United States. But Mr. Brezhnev can be expected repeat Soviet concern over the escalation of the fighting in Vietnam and to urge Mr. Nixon to return the United States to the Paris talks in the hope that a negotiated settlement can be reached. Mr. Nixon will probably repeat his belief that the Russians can do more than they have done to pressure Hanoi to show restraint and to adopt a genuine give-and-take approach in negotiations with the United

The Soviet leaders would be most interested in anything that Mr. Nixon volunteers about his trip last February to Peking, but because of the sensitivity of the China issue to the Soviet Union, it is quite possible that China will not be seriously discussed. Mr. Nixon may choose to repeat his oft-stated pledge not to take advantage of the Sino-Saviet rivalry, thereby assuring the Soviet Union that he is not interested in a deal with Peking at Moscow's expense. For fear of alienating China, which rejects the idea, Mr. Nixon will probably avoid being drawn into ac-ceptance of Soviet plans for a world disarmament conference.

THE MIDDLE EAST: Mr. Nixon and Mr. Breahnev have a direct interest in a settlement of the Middle East crisis, and the two sides are expected to discuss the Arab-Israeli dispute at some length. Mr. Nixon would like some commitment from the Russians to limit the arms flow in the area, but he is unlikely to get any Soviet support for the idea since Moscow seems to believe its main leverage on the Revotians is its continued supply to them of war materiel.

Likewise, the Soviet leaders will probably fail to get Mr. Nixon to agree to communiqué language that urges Israel to accept prior to any negotiations the principle of complete withdrawal from all territory occupied in the 1987 Arab-Israeli war. The two sides may end up with language repeating support for the Nov. 22, 1967, UN Security Council resolution that called for a negotiated settlement of the war.

In the discussion of the Middle East, Mr. Nixon is sure to raise again his concern about bigpower responsibility for the use made of military equipment by "client" states. He was angered by India'e invasion of East Paki-

Bilateral Issues

STRATEGIC ARMS LIMITA-TION: There seems no question but that the 1972 summit will be best remembered for the unveiling of the first Soviet-American limitation on strategie arms. Barring some last-minute hitches, the two sides seem to have just about wrapped up the first phase of the negotiations, which began in November, 1969. Aside from the details of the accord, the agreement is important because it makes implicit that the United States and the Soviet Union have dropped efforts to secure unilateral advantages in the arms race. The two superpowers now are agreed in princalled "equal security" for both

Under the first-stage agreement, the two powers will probably announce a treaty limiting each side to something under 200 anti-ballistic missiles for defense of either their capitals or one or two offensive-missile sites. This defensive-missile treaty will be accompanied by some kind of agreement, short of a treaty that needs Senate approval, that will limit the number of land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles to those either in operation or under construction. The two sides will pledge not to increase the number of launchers, but will be able to replace and modernize the equipment they now have.

In their private discussions, Mr. Nixon and Mr. Brezhnev will probably stress their desire that the first-stage strategic arms limitation be followed up with a second accord that will reduce the number of weapons in each other's arsenal. The second stage, however, will be considerably more difficult to negotiate, because reduction of arms implies a degree of trust not yet present in Soviet-American relations. The final communique undoubtedly will highlight the SALT agreement and affirm each side's desire to use their immense resources for peaceful endeavors instead of military ones.

INCIDENTS AT SEA: The two governments will also announce in Moscow final details on an agreement simed at avoiding collisions and other harassment between naval vessels of the two Mr. Nixon's sealing off of North stan last December and the re- countries on the high seas. Dur-

ECONOMIC ISSUES: The United States and the Soviet Union are the world's greatest economic powers, but their commercial contacts are minimal. with trade averaging only about $200 million yearly. In recent months, however, intensive discussions have taken place with an eye to raising that trade to about $1 billion or $2 billion yearly. Mr. Kosygin, the Soviet Union's top economic official, will undoubtedly stress to Mr. Nixon his country's strong desire to see a close economic relationship with the United States.

During the summit, talks will continue on a Soviet-American comprehensive trade agreement. setting goals for commerce over the next few years and removing restrictions set by each side on the other's goods and services.

On specific issues, the two sides will announce details of a merchant agreement that will allow more Soviet and American ships to stop at each other's ports and setting up an arrangement by which most trade between the two countries will be carried in either Soviet or American-flag vessels. There may be some progress noted to a resolution of the Soviet Union's long-standing World

War II lend-lease debt to the United States. At last count, the two sides were $500 million apart. The Soviet-American trade agreement would provide for granting the Russians equal tariff treatment—the so-called most-favored-nation treatment-

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT) .-The queasiness that infiltrated

Wall Street almost two months ago with the intensification of the Vietnam fighting finally subsided late last week as investors once again paid stiention to the fundamental strengths in the nation's economy.

To a lesser extent, the stock market's sharp rise in the final two sessions of the week was also helped hy the reduced worry about a confrontation with the Soviet Union and China over the Vietnam situation and by beightened confidence over the outcome of President Nixon's visit to

There was no doubt, however, that the major reason for the market'e first dicisive upturn in five weeks was the convincing evidence in economic data from Washington and in business reports from across the country that the pace of the economic recovery was quickening.

The principal propellants behind the market's surge were recent favorable reports on industrial production, retail sales, new orders for durables, housing activity, corporate profits, personal income. the gross national product and business spending.

Deficit Reduced

Also encouraging was the moderate rate of increase (0.2 percent) in consumer prices during April and the hig reduction in the U.S. internstional payments deficit in the first quarter to $3.49 billion-still large and worrisome, but about half the red ink that flowed in the fourth quarter of 1971.

The market is obviously poised to move significantly higherspurred by satisfactory sales, profits and credit conditions and probably would have already done side worries to cope with.

With many economic statistics now available for April, together with the revised data for the first quarter, it is ohvious that the economy has been pulsating strongly. The economic community is rather unanimous that the tempo of husiness activity will be at an even-faster beat as the year progresses. Some economists have begun to raise their year-end forecasts by a few billion dollars, and the consensus prediction of a $100-billion increase in the grose national product for 1972 looks better and better with each new economic statistic issued.

The most encouraging recent piece of economic news was the report on industrial production for April Output of the nation's facmonth jumped by an unusually large 1 percent in the government's index to 110.9 percent of the 1967 base average.

It was the eighth consecutive monthly rise and put the production level about 4 1/2 percent above volume a year ago.

The continuing upturn in production, coupled with larger capital spending and the beginning of a stronger pace of inventorybuilding, underscore the fact that husiness confidence is definitely widening. Many companies are reported to be stepping up their hiring and their outlays for advertising and research as well as for new plant and equipment.

active trading. Several market averages closely approached their historic highs.

There were 1,132 issues on the New York Stock Exchange that scored gains, while 645 showed declines and 170 ended with no net change. Turnover increased to 78.2 million shares from 71.9 million the week before.

The Dow Jones industrial stock average climbed 19.71 points to 961.54; The New York Times comhined average advanced 17.45 to 816.91; Standard & Poor's 500-stock index moved up 2.60 to 108.98, and the stock exchange composite rose 1.35 to 60.54. Selective buying dominated trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The week's volume leader was American Telephone. which rose 3/8 to 42 7/8, on a turnover of 970,900 shares. The issue traded within a small fraction of its year's low of 42 1/4 during the week.

Gulf Oil Active

The second most active issue was Gulf Oil, which slipped 3/8 to 24 3/4, with 969,000 shares changing hands. This issue made a new 1972 low of 23 3/4 during the week before firming.

In third spot was Federal National Mortgage Association, known as Fanny Mae, which dropped 1 1/8 to 31 7/8 on 918,560 shares. The company said this week its 1972 earnings should stabilize in comparison with the dramatic profit rise in 1971, when share earnings climbed to $1.43 a share, against 19 cents in 1970. International Nickel gained 1 5/8 to 32 1/8 on a turnover of 810,900 shares. There was considerable institutional activity in the issoe. In fifth place on the active list was Eastern Air Lines, trading 651,100 shares. The stock climbed 2 to 30. Airline issues were stronger during the week on prospects for improved earnings,

Best, who has been in Spain since Tuesday while Northern Ireland soccer officials were searching for him to play in the British championship match against Scotland yesterday, said in the article, "Mentally and physically I am a bloody wreck. Nobody knows what has been going on behind the glamorous image of George Best."

He made it clear that his decision to quit the game was final— It is finished. For good. I've made up my mind to get out before the game kills me."

Best said he decided to quit Tuesday morning. He travelled to Manchester airport and asked for a ticket "on the first plane out to anywhere."

He said he had been drinking heavily and staying out late "be-cause I was frightened to go to my goldfish bowl of a home. I was in a void of despair, frightened of the telephone's ring, fearing the sound of the door-

North and South were using by West, Precision, but were not very precise on this occasion. North's rebid of one no-trump, following the strong artificial oneclub opening bid, showed the equivalent of a no-trump opening using standard methods. His preference to two spades on the next round should have discouraged South, since with a promising hand he would have jumped to three spades.

South's jump to four no-trump broke one of the basic rules of Blackwood: Never ask for aces holding two possible quick losers in an unbid suit. If South was determined to look for a slam, a better course would have been to bid three hearts over two spades, hoping to determine whether North held any club control.

Since spades and diamonds had been bid naturally by the opponents, West thought he had to guess which of the other suits to lead. He chose hearts, which turned out to be fatal. The declarer was delighted that West had not led clubs, and won in his hand with the hart ace. He drew trumps, cashed dummy's heart winners to discard a club, and led, a club.

East put up the clob king and routinely returned a beart. After South ruffed, he had no trouble guessing which way to finesse in diamonds. He knew that East had begun with three spades and five hearts, so that the majority of diamonds was sure to be on his left. West was therefore likely to have the diamond queen, so South led the nine and let it run. When this held, the ten was finessed, and the declarer was able to make the slam with five spade tricks, four diamond tricks and three heart tricks. The chief defensive error was who should have sed the winning opening lead. East had had an opportunity to make a lead-directing double of five hearts and had not taken it. Therefore he had no positive desire for a heart lead. But he could well have a positive desire for a club lead, and this negative inference would have defeated

The Inside Story of the Howard Hughes-Cliffor Irving Affair

By Stephen Fay, Lewis Chester and Magnus Linkigte Illustrated. Viking. 310 pp. $10.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

You might think that by this time the Howard Hughes-Clifford Irving Affair has had it -that nothing more could pos-sibly be added to newspaper and magazine accounts that have already detailed the book swindle all the way down to the organic prune that danced in the imagination of co-conspirator Richard Suskind, or the police memorabilis that adorned the walls of Irving's childhood home. So you might be inclined to conclude that "Hoax," an account of the caper by three young reporters from the Sunday Times of London, is simply not worth bothering with that enough is enough.

Well, you would be wrong. For one thing, Messrs. Fay, Chester and Linklater do offer new details. (or ones at least that seem new to this reviewer). They have told, for instance, how Irving was inadvertently trapped into telling all to the district attorney because when two reporters told him that they knew "all about Maier" (meaning John Meier, the former Hughes aide who at one point was suspected of being Irving's conduit to Hughes) Irving thought they were referring to Stanley Meyer, the Hollywood reporter who had given Irving the key material (by former Hughesmen Noah Dietrich and Hughes-watcher Jim Phelan) on which Irving's manuscript was based. And the authors of "Hoax" have revealed, for another instance, how at least one investigator, a handwriting analyst with the U.S. Postal Service, concluded that it was the Irvings themselves who produced the forgeries of Hughes's signature and handwriting. Which is to mention just two of a dozen beams of light that are thrown by this book on the whole confusing af-

You would be wrong because, for another thing, the authors of "Hoax" have put the whole story together so that it reads, not as a series of shocking revelations exploding before a baffled but curlous public (as it did in the versions that unfolded in the press), but instead as an almost fictional caper marked by both brilliant planning and incredible luck. (For instance, Irving apparently had no idea that the Dietrich-Phelan material even existed when he first approached McGraw-Hill with his project; came later—by pure luck, or so it seems—and it-was this windfall that prompted him to change the project from an authorized biography to an autobiography, and to raise the advance from McGraw-Hill by $100,000.)

UNIONDALE, N.Y., May 21 (NYT).—The Indiana Pacers won the American Basketball Association championship with a 108-105 victory over the New York Nets at the Nassan Coliseum, tak-ing the best-of-seven final series, four games to two. Roger Brown, a New Yorker and the first player the Pacers signed when they came into being five seasons ago, hit on 10 of 17 2-point field-goal attempts and half of his six attempts at 3-point baskets, finishing with 32 points. The ABA awards 3 points for shots from 25 feet and beyond. Once more the New York Mets couldn't stand the prosperity of a big lead. They blew a 20-point lead in the sixth game Thursday. Yesterday, they had a 12-point odvantage halfway through the second period.

After the teams were tied, 28-

28. at the end of the first quarter, Billy Paultz, who had 20 points and 14 rebounds before he fouled out in the closing minute of the game, led the Nets on a 19-7 spurt.

12-Point Lead That the Nets could take a 12-point leed was surprising because they played without John Roche and with a subpar Rick Barry and Ollie Taylor. Roche, who had averaged almost 20 points in the previous five games of this series, sprained his left ankle in Indianapolis Thursday night. Barry jammed his left shoulder in a Friday practice session and aggravated it in the warm-up drill yesterday. He was taken out of the game early in the first quarter and returned eight minutes later with two shots of novocaine in the back of the neck. It wasn't the same Barry who went in the series with 166 points, tops on both teams. He cored 23 points, shooting six for 14 from the floor.

Taylor, who suffered a sprained left wrist in the sixth game, injured his left ankle in the third period. He had one of his better scoring games, with 16 points, but his rebounding was not up to par. Melchionni Scores 23

Billy Melchionni, who started in place of Roche, came out of a slump and hit for 23 points. He shot 9 for 22. It was Brown who wrecked the said Bob Leonard, the Pacer coach. "He has to be one of the outstanding players for his size that has ever played this game." The law would be very simple. Any presidential candidate caught in public would immediately have to go to jail for six months. Bail would be forbidden. Sentence could not be suspended Mercy could not be granted, Letting these people move about freely control law is irrefutable. 1. If we do not get them off the streets we will wake up some presidential election morning with nobody to vote for because all the candidates will have been shot weeks before and no others will have been found brave enough to take their places. 2. This is not because we are a particularly violent people, as commentators always insist immediately after one of our great state shootings. To the contrary. We are remarkably peaceable compared to the people of most Latin American, Asian, Arab. Balkan and Mediterranean countries. Compare the even-tempered screnity of our behavior in traffic with the aggressive hysteria of motorists in such sup-posedly civilized states as France and Italy. Traffic is the true test of the mass temperament and Americans pass it with high marks for peaceful conduct.

3. The plentitude of gunsguns for everybody—is one of the factors that makes conditions different here. If other countries let everybody run about armed to the teeth as we do there wouldn't be enough politicians left in the world some years to get a quorum at the United Nations.

4. We cannot take the guns away from our citizens because Constitution guarantees everybody "the right to bear The Constitution says nothing about candidates having the right to use the streets. When the claims of gun-bearers Scipio Spinks pitched an eighth-

Thus, for example, in Britain where guns are forbidden to the man in the street, political assassins can still essay their evil intent. They may, for example, hire a taxi and offer the driver ten-shilling tip if he will fatally run down the prime minister crossing Whitehall Similar weapons are available here, as the gun lobby correctly notes.

Constitution: it would not help.

In truly violent countries. of course, important politicians do not walk across busy streets in their shirtsleeves. They realize that hired taxis may be atmed at them, and they stay under American politicians cannot do this at present, for various reasons:

(A) Andrew Jackson campaigned by standing in front of a general store, shaking hands with the shoppers and asking them to "help me now, you hear?" Ever since then campaigners have heen expected to around shaking hands and asking people for help, which is exceed-ingly foolish because even if he shook ten hands a minute, 10 hours a day, for an entire year, a candidate could shake hands with only 2.2 million people, or about 1 percent of the population.

(B) This absurdity is forced upon candidates because mingling with the people is supposed to improve their common touch, which is another absurdity. The people who press in at campaign rallies to shake hands—leaving assassins out of it-are almost always devoted followers who want to assure the candidate that he is not common at all, but quite possibly divine. The candidate would be better off in a television studio replying to telephone calls from those odd people who call up broadcasting stodies in the middle of the day. (C) A sensible candidate who

John Crowe Ransom

A New Critic Turns 84

By Thomas Lask

GAMBIER, Ohio (NYT) .-Gambier is a small town soms 50 miles northeast of Columbus, surrounded by undulating fields touched hy the spring green. It is the home of Kenyon College, a moderatesized liberal arts school recently gone coed. The town does not so much house the college as run conterminous with it. A visitor, looking down the one broad street with its village inn (restaurant only), the college bookstore and a bank whose fortresslike exterior proclaims the absolute safety of its deposits, asks where the town is and is told, "This is it."

It's a town where a man leaves his car unlocked and running as he dips into the post office, where a fiercely mustachioed young man in blus jeans waves hello to the sheriff cruising in his car (and where until a couple of years ago there was not even a sheriff), where a woman driver gives a hitch to a young man waiting for a lift into Mount Vernon five miles away. And where the birds peck at the suet and seeds left for their delectation.

Influential

It certainly doesn't seem to be quite the place that was the spiritual armory of the New Criticism, the geographical embodiment of the profession of letters, where the autonomy of the work of art was proclaimed, where form, structure, tradition were defended against subjective involvement, emotional slither and technical anarchy.

John Crowe Ransom, whom many consider the single most influential figure in the New Criticism as a poet, theoretician ("The World's Body," "The New Criticism") and editor of the powerful Kenyon Review (no longer in existence), has lived since he came to teach at Kenyon in 1937. (It would be hard to convey to a younggeneration the magic of name. Not only wers he and his magazine read, but he was the man whom every undergraduate interested in literature tried to please. To have a piece in The Kenvon Review scaling Mount Everest).

Courtly

Mr. Ransom found Kenyon coign of vantage and finds it now a place of refuge. Retired from Kenyon since 1958, he and Mrs. Ransom live with their widowed daughter, Mrs. Helen Forman, in an unpretentious house a few blocks from the main gate to Kenyon College proper. He has just turned 84, and his publisher, New Directions, has just issued a new collection of his essays. "Beating the Bushes." It seemed a good time to ask him how those critical wars appeared to him now over such a long distance.

Slight, courtly in every gesture, with a wide-mouthed smile and eyes alert, Mr. Ransom soon made it evident, however, that he had reached an age and a time when not all subjects were of equal interest to him, and he used the privilege of age to pick and choose among the questions. His own criticism, the battles of long ago, had nowhere the interest for him as it had for his guest. Asked, for example, whether he still believed as he wrote in one volume that "the aesthetic experience is heyond good and evil," he answered little quizzically, "Did I say that?" and let the matter drop.

He had not yet seen his new book, "Beating the Bushes," until his visitor showed him his own copy. But ha displayed little of the excitement that a newly published book usually brings on. 'I had forgotten the title," Even when it was pointed out to him that this past April marked exactly 50 years since the first issue of The Fugitive, the literary magazine that was the incubator for many of the writers who later were known as Agrarians and New Critics, Mr. Ransom received the information philosophically. He did reminisce a little about the Fugitives, the group that had its base at Vanderbilt University and that included, among others, Donald Davidson, Allen Tate. Merril Moore and Robert Penn Warren, He recalled the time when they would gather periodically and debate their way through literary principles and practices and read and consider their works. He remembered that they met at the home of one of the older men, evidently more comfortably off. but his name escaped Mr. Ransom for the moment, (Sidney Hirsch? James Frank? Both?)

Diction

"I used to do a lot of it [crit-

resources are failing away, so I'll let it stand where it will' statement that effectively. put all talk about the critical past into a drawer and closed it.

Mr Rensom's diction by the way, is a good gloss on his poetic style. Speaking of the lack of support The Fugitive received from the English department or administration of Vanderbilt he said, "They repented later." And remarking that Donald Davidson headed the 'editorial board of The Fugitive, generally with the consent of the rest on the team, he added, "We never rebuked him." Certainly the verbs in those two sentences imparted a formality and an archaic diction to the talk that can be felt in his own poetry.

He was interested, though, inshowing his current preoccupation: revising his poetry. He held up typed copies of poems he was then working on, After glanc-ing at the titles, including "Piazza Piece" and "Dead Boy," his visitor commented that the poems were so enshrined in the memory of his readers and in anthologies as to be beyond change. This did trouble him, Mr. Ransom conceded. He did not want to make his readers read his book twice. Nevertheless, he said, when he had forgotten a poem and worked on it, it brought it back to life.

The kind of changes he was making could be gathered from two alterations, in "Here Lies a Lady," in the revised third edition of his "Selected Poems." where the second line in stanza three has been cut back from a hexameter to a pentameter and the antique "ys" has been dropped. Thus no matter what say, the emphasis today as in the past is on structure and texture.

Robert McGuirk, 62, has become what is believed to be Britain's first mayor to be on the country's relief rolls. McGuirk took office as mayor of Southampton, which entitles him to £1.750 annual expenses to supplement his £9.70 weekly relief check and a further £13.53 weekly pension from the Transport and General Workers' Union, from which he retired early as an official because of ill health. McGulrk has been sheriff of Southampton for the past 12 months, drawing dole money for nine of them, and is the Labor party representative for the Coxford ward on the Tory-controlled city council. "I did obtain work with a fruitmachine [slot-machine] and jukebox firm for 13 weeks," he said. "and this enabled me to re-
